Refugees are streaming into our cities. Maybe you saw a few headlines and felt like there was something you could do, but after a while... there were no more headlines. The refugees remain. The body of Christ is God's instrument to receive refugees in the midst of tragedy and pain. As the Body, we can respond quickly, comprehensively, responsibly, and compassionately. We can respond in a way that gives an appropriate trauma response from day one, followed by on-going healing conversations, and eventually leading to multiplying, on-going healing groups that meet together around God's Word. Join MultiplyingHope as it seeks to address the emotional needs of new refugees.

"But I'm not qualified or equipped!"

MultiplyingHope is confident that all believers have what they need from God to walk alongside those who are hurting.

Will you step out in faith to journey with someone?

Join us for a one-day training to learn how to initiate "healing conversations" and lovingly receive the refugees coming into your area.

What's a "healing conversation"?

New refugees are not ready for traditional healing groups that ask them to share their past pain. They need community building and survival tools for their transitional situation.

A healing conversation builds 1) community and trust, 2) points people to God, and 3) encourages them to help each other. Healing conversations consist of...

- How to listen well
- Initial trauma healing tools for the first conversations
- A Bible story that encourages people from any faith background and points them to the God who is with us.
- Encouraging refugees to share the healing encouragement they are receiving.

This training does not replace professional mental health care. Many refugees may need professional care, and we seek to help identify and refer those who need it to the appropriate care.
